

CLIQUE

HOUSE PROUD In Designs for Living: Houses by Robert A.M. Stern Architects from The Monacelli Press, Roger H. Seifert, Randy L. Correll, Grant F. Marani, and Gary L. Brewer hang out their shingles, so to speak, as the leaders of the firm's residential practice. The volume tours readers through fifteen houses completed by the RAMSA partners over the last decade. Stylistically diverse, historically informed, contextually appropriate, and functionally up to the moment, each offers its own lesson in timelessness. monacellipress.com

FUTURE SHOCK On site through September 6 at MoMA PS1 in Long Island City is Hy-Fi, this year's eco-inventive winning entry in the Museum of Modern Art and MoMA PS1's annual Young Architects Program. Designed by The Living (David Benjamin), a cutting-edge New York firm, and completed in collaboration with Ecovative, an innovative material science company, Hy-Fi is a silo-shaped tower made, remarkably, from organic and reflective bricks custom formed from a new film developed by 3M. Fantastically enough, this is a case of technology generating biology generating structure, as the reflective bricks become growing trays for the organic bricks. IN JULY AND AUGUST,
DESIGN IS EVERYWHERE
WE LOOK, BOTH
INDOORS AND OUT

PILLOW TALK Need a quick summer house refreshment? Accessories that convey cooling tones into the hot season? For just that purpose, Judy Ross Textiles recently introduced the deliciously bold Procession pattern in a deliriously intense, aquatically suggestive palette of marine blue and cream. Hand-embroidered by the firm's artisans in the finest, hand-dyed New Zealand wool, the 18-inch by 18-inch throw cushion features a cotton canvas overlay backing and an insert of 5-percent down/95-percent feathers. Two additional colorways are available: cream and cornflower, and marine, oyster, and cream. judyrosstextiles.com CONTINUED >
